Gastro-oesophageal reflux disease is increasingly recognised as a condition with a substantial prevalence among adult population. We report a patient with a clinical picture of gastro-oesophageal reflux disease and bronchiectasis who had not previously been identified as a high risk group. He responded to medical management with PPI's for several months, but then developed chest problems. This case highlighted how GERD may contribute to the aetiology of bronchiectasis. Is it just us or are genetically modified crops bad for the environment? The Food and Health Bureau at the Australian Centre for Food Authority says yes. The study, which was published in the Independent Science Review, found that genetically modified crops have environmental costs. According to the Food and Health Bureau, the use of genetically modified crops is leading to an increase of synthetic pesticides in the environment. "Pesticides can harm the environment and impact on the health of humans and wildlife," says Dr Catherine Bowman, Chief Scientific Officer, Food and Health Bureau. "We don't want to use pesticides, or any other substances, that may impact on the environment or human and animal health." Breeding and cultivating GM crops can damage ecosystems by, for example, eliminating the natural controls of weeds and pests. GM crops also encourage the use of pesticides due to the need to combat the super-resistant problem. The Food and Health Bureau says that simply replacing GM crops with crops that are not genetically modified will not, alone, solve the problem. "[GM crops] are being grown in the field using methods that can lead to the use of a lot more pesticides than would be required if a crop was grown using conventional breeding techniques," says Dr Bowman. "This may cause ecological problems." Any decisions concerning GM crops should not be made on the basis of whether or not they will increase yields, she says. "The use of GM crops should be based

Q: C# - WebClient DownloadString not returning proper response I have an embedded system that sends packets to a server (internal to the company) and I need to retrieve the response packets (Data). I'm downloading the response using a WebClient and I'm having issues correctly reading the data. The server sends a response with a HTTP 302 and a Location header, with a link that the client needs to open (the normal scenario) and the server doesn't send any response data with the response. Example of a Response: HTTP/1.1 302 Found Date: Fri, 11 Jan 2012 23:08:35 GMT Server: Microsoft-HTTPAPI/2.0 Location: Cache-Control: private Content-Type: text/html; charset=utf-8 Set-Cookie: a=b; domain=string.test; expires=Fri, 11 Jan 2012 23:08:35 GMT; path=/; secure Content-Length: 5 Example of the Code (that I need to detect the start of the response): WebClient client = new WebClient(); client.Headers.Add("Host", "string.test"); client.Headers.Add("Proxy-Connection", "keep-alive"); client.Headers.Add("Cache-Control", "max-age=0"); client.Headers.Add("Content-Type", "text/html"); client.Headers.Add("User-Agent", "Mozilla/5.0 (Windows; U; Windows NT 5.1; en-US; rv:0.9.8) Gecko/2008072217 Firefox/3.0.8"); client.Headers.Add("Accept", "text/html"); client.Headers.Add("Pragma", "no-cache"); client.Headers.Add("Cache-Control", "max-age=0 6d1f23a050
